COVID-19: Health and public financial management in Africa

12 August 2020

Dr Kesetebirhan Admasu
KEYNOTE SPEAKER

Dr Kesetebirhan (Kesete) Admasu is the CEO of Big Win Philanthropy, an independent foundation that invests in children and young people in developing countries to improve their lives and to maximise demographic dividends for long-term economic growth. A medical doctor by training, Dr Admasu served as Minister of Health of the Federal Democratic Republic of Ethiopia from 2012–2016. Prior to his appointment as Minister, Dr Admasu served as State Minister for the Health Programmes and Director General of the Health Promotion and Disease Prevention General Directorate in the Ministry.

Dr Nkechi Olalere
SPEAKER

Dr Nkechi Olalere is the executive director of the Strategic Purchasing Africa Resource Center (SPARC). Previously, she served as Regional Technical Advisor (East & West Africa) Sustainable Health Financing at the Clinton Health Access Initiative, Inc. (CHAI). She led CHAI's support to Rwanda's Community Based Health Insurance Scheme. Nkechi has had an extensive career in health financing implementation and before joining the development sector, she served at different times, as both start-up and turn-around C-suite executive in various health insurance firms operating the National Health Insurance Scheme and private health insurance plans in Nigeria.

Alfred Okoh
